In my eyes a great leader was Mohandas Karamchand Gandhi. He fought for what he believed in without violence, and only peace. He led a whole country to independence. Gandhi was one of the most influential people ever to step foot on the Earth. He helped bring india to harmony in one of its toughest times. Here are some reasons why I believe Gandhi was one of the most influential leaders that ever lived.

Lets start off by talking about who Gandhi was. Gandhi was born on October 2nd 1869 in Porbandar, Kathiawar Agency, British India. He was restless and was always found either playing or roaming around as a child. At the age of 13, he married a 14 year old girl named Kasturbai Makhanji Kapadia. This was normal back then to marry at that age. His father was a leader in the community, an upper class member that took charge in a lot of the community roles, so he was born into an upper class family. His parents wanted him to become a barrister, which is a type of lawyer, so at the age of 19 he decided to go to London, England and wet to the University College London in order to study law. He wasn't very successful at that, but he persevered and got a job with and Indian Law Firm and moved to South Africa. It was there where he experienced racial prejudice(which is not liking someone, because of the color of their
