the vampire and the sad elephant

One day Existential there was a sad elephant named Proper Noun. He was sad because none of the other elephants would play with him. A vampire comes sees the sad elephant and says, "Hi. Might I introduce Pronoun? My name is Zompie and I am a vampire." Quietly, Adjective the sad elephant said "Hi" but did not tell the Noun his name. Zompie says "I am going to Verb your Noun because that is what us vampires do but I am going to give you the chance to run away and escape." Ellie remained there and did not move. Zompie was really surprised as this was the Adjective time no-one would run away from him. He tried to scare him off so that he would start running away but Ellie just remained Verb - Present Tense there and not even showing that he was Verb - Past Participle. After more than 4 hours of trying to get a reaction from Ellie, Proper Noun the vampire gave up and Adverb walked away Adjective. All the Noun - Plural that had been looking at what was happening from a distance started clapping and stomping their hoofs and praising Ellie for bravery because he was not scared of the vampire. Suddenly Ellie was the most Adjective elephant in the jungle and this made him really happy.

The End.
