When I woke up one _____ Noun I felt as if something was _____ Adjective. I went into the kitchen and immediately knew I was correct. _____ Noun, _____ Proper Noun what a gory sight my kitchen was. The real question is how did it get like this. I try to convince myself that it was a break in but as I begin to stare at the dead body of my wife _____ First Name of a Person I begin to get sudden snapshots of the prior _____ Noun. Me and my wife had got into a fight and it got heated. We yelled and she slapped me and that's when everything went black. I remember watching CSI and seeing how _____ Noun - Plural clean up the crime scene and I right away began to start scrubbing the floors on my hands and knees. Oh how that blood was so thick. When my neighbor heard a _____ Adjective commotion she called the cop and I was arrested. I thought I might get away but because of how advanced the forensic specialist were I ended up getting caught and charged with the _____ Noun of my wife and sentenced to life in prison all because of a luminol test. Although I cleaned up her blood and thought I could get away the iron in her blood and the undetectable blood is what got me convicted so now I spend my days _____ Verb - Present Tense in the states prison but the urge to kill again never leaves.....
