

Creation Story

1. Adjective
2. Adjective
3. Verb - Present Ends In Ing
4. Noun - Plural
5. Noun
6. Noun - Plural
7. Verb - Present Tense
8. Verb - Present Tense
9. Noun - Plural
10. Noun - Plural
11. Noun - Plural
12. Adjective
13. Noun
14. Adjective
15. Adjective
16. Noun - Plural
17. Noun - Plural
18. Adjective
19. Adverb
20. Verb - Past Participle
21. Adjective
22. Verb - Present Tense
23. Noun - Plural

24. Adjective
25. Noun
26. Noun - Plural
27. Adjective
28. Noun

Creation Story

Have you ever wondered why Iceland is _____ Adjective _____ and Greenland is _____ Adjective _____? It all started with a shady dude named Eric the Red. Well... not with him exactly, but close enough. Eric's father was charged with _____ Verb - Present ends in ING _____. Unfortunately, these savages did not take kindly to their own brethren dying. The only way they deemed it necessary was for them to be exiled from their country of origin, Norway. So they set sail to Iceland, the land of _____ Noun - Plural _____ and _____ Noun _____. There is always an old saying that goes something along the lines of this: "like father, like son." So in Iceland, it wasn't his father who committed manslaughter, it was Eric this time. After getting into several disputes about _____ Noun - Plural _____, Eric was not entertained and ended up _____ Verb - Present Tense _____ and _____ Verb - Present Tense _____ several men. Eric was banished from Iceland for 3 years because the people back then had _____ Noun - Plural _____ up their _____ Noun - Plural _____ and the only thing they liked doing was kicking someone out of their home. He spent 3 years sailing in the area around Iceland. Like all great _____ Noun - Plural _____, as soon as his 3 years were up, Eric returned home and started talking about all the _____ Adjective _____ sights he saw. He was telling all the _____ Noun _____ that he had seen such an amazing land. He claimed that it was _____ Adjective _____ and should be named "Greenland." However, Eric might have stretched the truth a little bit. These people were _____ Adjective _____ though. With due time, he was able to muster up enough _____ Noun - Plural _____ to take over to the newfound place called Greenland and start a settlement. That is how Greenland got came to be.

Now as for Iceland, the tale goes that a guy named Floki Vilgeroarson was in charge of naming the country. Just like

Eric the Red, Floki was from Norway. What sparked his attention into setting sail were the _____ Noun - Plural of a land far off in the distance. Being the _____ Adjective man he was, Floki gathered up some of his family and friends and set sail _____ Adverb. This journey was a failure though. He ended up losing one of his daughters in the ocean, because she drowned-- but it wasn't his fault she didn't know how to swim, right? Floki's other daughter got _____ Verb - Past Participle and did not continue on when they made a stop on the journey to Iceland. This was good news for Floki, because he didn't have to deal with those _____ Adjective women anymore. Even still, Floki was dead set on _____ Verb - Present Tense this new land. When he did not know what direction to take, he let his ravens decide. When in doubt, follow the _____ Noun - Plural. In the summer, he arrived at the beautiful paradise he had been dreaming about his entire life. But in the winter, the land was a _____ Adjective fjord. The land was bitterly cold, and his family had no experience with the _____ Noun. When Floki's _____ Noun - Plural died, he decided it may be a good idea to head home. Upon his return, Floki explained to his people that Iceland was a _____ Adjective mistake, and no one must settle the land. Too bad he had only seen a small part of the island, as it was the _____ Noun he had always dreamed it to be.