she met a(n) Adjective Noun - Person, but no dragons. Finally the people in Place Name told her to go back to where she'd started! Poor Same Name began to Verb - Base Form.

"There are no more dragons anywhere!" she said. "I am the last! I want to Verb - Base Form!"

Just then, a(n) Animal landed on Same Name - Possessive Part of Body. "There ARE more dragons!" he said. "I saw them in Place Name! They are Adjective and Adjective. Go there now!" So Same Name flew to Same Place Name. There she found a dragon Noun. One very old Animal was guarding it.

"Excuse me. Is this where the dragons live?" Same Name asked him.

"No. This is where the dragons lived," he answered. "They are all Adjective now. Look for them in Place Name."

"I will never find them there!" Same Name sobbed. "I am the last dragon."

Same Name was so Adjective that she used her dragon magic to turn herself into a Noun.

The people there call the Same Noun, "The Adjective Same Noun," and all Verb - Transitive and Verb - Transitive it. And so now there are no more dragons... but at last Same Name is Adjective.
