The Real Story of the von Trapp Family

I first saw the movie The Sound of Music as a young child, probably in the late Noun-Plural. I liked the Noun, and Maria was so Adjective and kind! As I grew older, more aware of world history, and saturated by viewing the movie at least once, I was struck and annoyed by the somewhat sanitized story of the von Trapp family it told, as well as the bad and costumes. "It's not historically accurate!" I'd protest, a small archivist in the making. In the early I saw Maria von Trapp herself on Dinah Shore's television show, and, was she not like the Proper Noun Proper Noun version of Maria! She didn't look like Julie, and she came across as a true force of nature. In thinking about the fictionalized movie version of Maria von Trapp as compared to this very real Maria von Trapp, I came to realize that the story of the von Trapp family was probably something closer to, and therefore much more interesting, than the movie led me to believe.
Part of the story of the real von Trapp family can be found in the records of the National Archives. When they fled the Nazi regime in Austria, the von Trapps traveled to Proper Noun. Their entry into the Proper Noun Proper Noun - Plural and their subsequent applications for citizenship are Verb - Past Participle in the holdings of the National Archives and Records Administration.
