Nancy

Once upon a time, there lived a           Noun           named Nancy. She was an           Adjective                     Noun          .

Everyone           Verb - Past Tense           her! She let her           Noun           play           Noun - Plural          , and have           Noun          , and gave them           Noun - Plural          . She was always           Verb - Present Tense           up on her team, to see how they were doing. Along with her director of           Noun          ,           Proper Noun          , and her rehab           Noun                     Proper Noun          , they created an           Adjective                     Noun           to           Verb          . Nancy has a           Noun          , four           Noun - Plural          , and a           Noun           named Lucy. She lives in a           Adjective                     Noun           in Greenville, and she drives a           Adjective                     Noun          .

At work, she           Preposition or subordinating conjunction           about her           Coordinating conjunction           and the residents. She always goes           Adverb           and           Preposition or subordinating conjunction          ! She comes in           Adjective          , stays           Adjective          , and is on call           Number           hours a           Noun          .

Nancy           to           to run, almost obsessively. But not as           Adjective           as her friend/          Verb - Present                     Tense           partner Monica. Poor Nancy doesn't have her           Noun                     Noun           here at work any more, so she has to           Verb           with her           Noun           at home now.

She almost always has a           Preposition or subordinating conjunction           on her face, and is           Coordinating conjunction           and           to           to even the           Preposition or subordinating conjunction           of family members. She takes           Noun           in her           Noun          , and in her           Noun          . She has a           Noun           to           Verb           on, an           Noun           to           Verb          , and open           Noun - Plural           whenever a           Noun           is needed.
