Explanation

I used the techniques of _____ Verb - Present ends in ING _____ and _____ Verb - Present ends in ING _____ because I saw in Helena's

_____ Noun _____ a proliferation of _____ Noun - Plural _____ that worked most _____ Adverb _____ to create a _____ Noun _____ and carried some strong _____ Noun - Plural _____. First, I got rid of all the uses of " _____ Adjective-_____ Phrase-Transitive Verb _____" in order to expose other ways that the text _____ Verb - Past Tense _____ with itself. Also, removing " _____ Adjective _____" left a lot of "I" statements that were more _____ Adjective _____, since usually "

Adjective-Phrase-Transitive Verb _____" proceeds a _____ Adjective - Ends in ER _____ Noun _____ of how the "I" is Verb - Present Tense _____ or feeling. After that, it was a matter of _____ Verb - Present Tense _____ a _____ Noun _____

Preposition or subordinating conjunction _____ the leftover text that _____ Verb - Past Tense _____ the preoccupations of the original _____ Noun _____. I wanted to _____ Verb _____ a stuttering, fragmentary, grasping _____ Noun _____ that would Verb _____ the rushed _____ Noun _____ of the original, but without the _____ word that ends in -ness _____. It was

Adjective _____ to imagine multiple _____ Noun - Plural _____ by _____ Verb - Present ends in ING _____ both across a line and vertically into other lines, and I had to _____ Verb _____ a wide field of _____ Noun _____ and _____ Noun _____ by not " searching" for the _____ Noun - Plural _____ I _____ Verb - Past Tense _____ to _____ Verb _____ _____ Adjective _____. I also wanted to add reflexivity to the _____ Noun _____ to comment on the project of _____ Verb - Present ends in ING _____ an "

_____ Noun _____" and the processes of both the original _____ Noun _____ experiment and my alteration of it. I think this helped to heighten the stakes of the poem and to complicate the idea of what " _____ Adjective - Ends in ER _____ " actually _____ Verb - 3rd Person Singular Present _____ in different _____ Noun - Plural _____ and how it can be a compulsion or even _____ Verb _____ its opposite and to what extent it can retain its genuine meaning.
