Trouble in Teamspeak Town

It was just another peaceful day on the Teamspeak. Games were being played, awful jokes being made. The sound of the automated channel changing voice echoed in the air. Suddenly a loud voice said "This teamspeak is now being teleported." The owners of the teamspeak, First Name of a Person and First Name of a Person, were panicking. Had they been hacked? What was going on? The teamspeak tab blared a glowing white light. First Name of a Person grabbed onto their PC for dear life, and First Name of a Person tried to run. The light was a portal! One by one it consumed the teamspeak users, as they disappeared into their monitors and screens. Then they arrived, an island. All you could see was sea, going on and on. First Name of a Person broke down and started crying. "I'VE LOST MY GAMING SETUP FOREVER!" First Name of a Person jumped into the ocean and swimming as fast as they could. (First Name of a Person had to jump in and catch them before they drowned..) As the night fell, users of the teamspeak were replacing there gaming chairs and sofas with sand and rocks. First Name of a Person tried to light a fire, whilst First Name of a Person jumped around in the sea trying to catch fish. First Name of a Person looked up into the night sky and shouted "I SWEAR I'LL NEVER ILLEGALLY DOWNLOAD FALLOUT 4 AGAIN, PLEASE LET ME LIVE!" A happy shout was heard from the beach, a fire had been lit. Whilst First Name of a Person was now trying to catch bugs to eat, they were wishing they had left the house more. First Name of a Person was punching trees, damaging more hand that bark. "IT'S A GLITCH!" they screamed. The teamspeak people gathered around the fire as they slowly fell asleep one by one. First Name of a Person snored louder than an overheating PC. But finally everyone shut down and went to sleep.
