"OOZE AND AAAAHH!s"

I will never forget the night it happened. It was a(n) Adjective night, and I was Verb - Present Tense upstairs with my Box, a good book and my faithful Horse, Deana. Suddenly there was a loud Bam!. I sprang to my feet and crept downstairs, trying to be as Snarky as I could. Noun looked out of the Adjective. Suddenly I heard the Bam! again, but this time it was much more Tipsy and I knew it was coming from the basement. Summoning my courage, I grabbed a flashlight and strode Slowly down the stairs. I might have met my end right there, if not for Deana, who let out a loud "Scream!" Startled, I jumped Drunkenly to the Noun just in time to avoid a long gooey appendage. I turned my flashlight on the intruder and gasped in horror. Lurking there in my basement, bathed in the Ditzzy glow of my light, was a huge, quivering, shapeless blob of ooze! The hideous thing was as Purple as a Dog and as Adjective as a(n) Ape.

"Bollocks!!" I cried.

I fled Surepitipusly upstairs, but the thing chased me with lightning speed. I was trapped, and knew I had to fight if I wanted to survive. First I tried to chop it with a sharp Proper Noun from the kitchen, then I shot it with my grandpas Cranberry that hangs over the fireplace. In desperation, I even tried throwing Water on it, but all to no avail. It just kept coming. Pronoun thought I was dead for sure, when suddenly a strange figure crashed through my window and leapt between us! He was tall and Beautiful, with fierce Ugly eyes and Greenish tinge shoulders. He was dressed entirely in black, except for his Minty green Tee shirt.

"Oh!!" the figure cried, and quick as a(n) Wee duck he jumped in and stunned the ooze creature with a Adjective kick.

Without pause he scooped the thing into a(n) Bun and tied it shut with a long Biscuit.

"How did you do that?!" I gasped, trying to catch my breath.

"Their only weakness is their Elbow," he replied. "One good kick and the things are helpless."

"But how do you find it?" I asked, staring at the shapeless mass.

"That is easy," said the stranger. "It is right next to their Toe."

I thanked him for saving my life and asked him his name. "I am Bonjour, and I have been hunting the ooze creatures all my life. Join me in my quest and we will make the world safe from their Sassy evil!"

Now that I knew the truth, how could I say no? I joined Bonjour that night and my life has never been the same.

I learned how to spot their Elbow in less than 23 seconds, and together we have defeated over 27 of the ooze creatures. I even got my own Minty green Tee shirt.
