The hungry lion

One day, a was walking through the forest. He was very hungry, and he needed something to eat.
He went to the Noun - Plural house, and said, "Please, may I have something to eat? I'm soooooo hungry!"
The replied, "Of course, I just started growing some conjunction, and I have too much of it! Please, take some!"
The tried the verb - Past Tense and said "Blech! This tastes yucky! I don' like Noun at all!" So the Noun kept walking, and was now even hungrier. Soon, the met a travelling salesman, who carried a big on his back that smelled very good.
The asked the man, "Please, may I have something to eat? I'm soooooo hungry!"
"Of course!" said the salesman, "In fact, in my bag here I have a whole bunch of Noun-Plural! These special smell just like! Please, take some Noun - Plural!"
So the, still very hungry, tried the that the salesman gave him. "Blech!
These Noun-Plural smell good, but they taste awful! I don't like Noun-Plural at all!"
So the kept walking. And by now, he was very, very hungry! Soon, he met a small boy, sitting or the edge of a river, holding a Noun with a string in his hands. The Noun asked "Please, may I have

The little boy looked at him and yelled, "Ahhh! It's a! He's going to eat me!" The little boy ran down the road leaving his with a string, and leaving the very confused.
The Noun saw the boy's Noun had a Noun on the end that the little boy was trying to pull in. The Noun tried the Noun and said, "Mmmmmm! This Noun is delicious! I like fish very much!" So the lion, now full from the, walked back into the forest for a nap.
