Lincoln Lyceum Address

Never

As a subject for the remarks of the evening, the perpetuation of our political institutions, is selected.

How then shall we perform it?--At what point shall we expect the approach of danger? By what means shall we fortify against it?-- Shall we expect some transatlantic military giant, to step the Ocean, and crush us at a blow?

!All the armies of Europe, and Africa combined, with all the treasure of the earth (our own excepted) in their military chest; with a Buonaparte for a, could not by force, take a Noun from the Ohio, or make a track on the Blue Ridge, in a trial of a thousand years.
At what point then is the approach of danger to be expected? I answer, if it ever reach us, it must spring up amongst us. It cannot come from abroad. If destruction be our lot, we must ourselves be its and finisher. As a nation of freemen, we must live through all time, or die by I hope I am over wary; but if I am not, there is, even now, something of ill-omen, amongst us. I mean the increasing disregard for law which substitute the wild and furious passions, in lieu of the sober judgment of Courts; and the worse than savage mobs , for the executive ministers of justice. This disposition is awfully fearful in any community; and that it now exists in ours, though grating to our feelings to admit, it would be a violation of, and an Noun to our intelligence, to deny. Accounts of outrages committed by mobs, form the every-day news of the times. They have pervaded the country, from New England to Louisiana;they are neither peculiar to the eternal snows of the former, nor the burning suns of the latter;they are not the of climate neither are they confined to the slave-holding, or the non-slave- holding States. Alike, they up among the pleasure hunting masters of Southern slaves, and the order loving citizens of the land of steady habits Whatever, then, their cause may be, it is common to the whole country.

It would be tedious, as well as useless, to recount the horrors of all of them. Those happening in the State of Proper Noun, and at St. Louis, are, perhaps, the most dangerous in example and revolting to humanity. In the Mississippi case, they first commenced by the regular gamblers; a set of men, certainly not following for a livelihood, a very useful, or very honest occupation; but one which, so far from being forbidden by the laws, was actually licensed by an act of the Legislature, passed but a single year before.
Next, negroes, suspected of conspiring to raise an insurrection, were caught up and hanged in all parts of the State: then, white men, supposed to be leagued with the negroes; and finally, strangers, from neighboring States, going thither on business, were, in many instances subjected to the same Thus went on this process of hanging, from gamblers to negroes, from negroes to white citizens, and from these to strangers; till, men were seen literally dangling from the boughs of upon every road side; and in numbers almost sufficient, to rival the native Spanish moss of the country, as a of the forest.
Turn, then, to that horror-striking scene at St. Louis. A single victim was only sacrificed there. His story is very Adjective ; and is, perhaps, the most highly tragic, if anything of its length, that has ever been witnessed in real life. A mulatto man, by the name of McIntosh, was seized in the street, dragged to the suburbs of the city, chained to a, and actually burned to death; and all within a hour from the time he had been a freeman, attending to his own business, and at peace with the
