TEsting

The Noun began work on the allotment in Proper Noun. Like many of their Noun they had a mind to stretch their household budget by growing fruit and vegetables, but they were also motivated by fear. That Spring their beloved son had finally left them and having tired of rolling unsteadily around their house , like two shriveling peas, they were desperate for more constructive ways to fill their time.

The couple's research had been thorough and they Verb - Past Tense themselves into the project with an earnest enthusiasm. First they checked the PH of the soil. Then they built a compost bin, decided which crop varieties were most suited to the composition of the earth and drew up a planting schedule for the Spring.

Overwintering vegetables - onions and cauliflower, Noun and leeks - were planted and the rest of their plot was forked and left rough dug, with the roots of any weeds exposed to the frosts that would follow.
