The Girl I Met Over The Summer

It was a Adjective day in August. I was Verb - Present Tense there with my Animal and looking at the kids across the Noun, playing with their new Noun - Plural. I hated their stupid Part of Body - Plural. They were Verb - Present Tense each other with their Noun - Plural.

Meanwhile, I was just sitting with old Name of Pet, thinking about that girl I met all those weeks ago in City. She was Adjective. Her Color hair shone in the sunlight as we Verb - Past Tense along the beach. I thought about how we Verb - Past Tense each other, Verb - Present Tense under the moonlight. She asked me if I wanted to Verb. I told her I did, and we went to her house and did just that. She gave me a Adjective Noun to remember her by. I gave her my Adjective Noun. The day before my family had to return to City, I went to go Verb her. She was Verb - Present Tense on the old Adjective steps, and she knew that this was the last time we would see each other. We spent the whole day together doing Adjective activities.

We went to the Place to see the new Noun - Plural. We went to the Place to buy some candies. We even went to the Nothing - Because I am lazy - Place to see the latest Noun.

Adverb, it was time to say goodbye. We Verb - Past Tense one last time, and I went back to the Building my family was staying at. I packed my bags, making sure to get all of my Noun - Plural, and taking special care to pack my favorite Noun. We went to the airport, and got on the Transportation back to town. I think I can say that my feelings for her were Adjective. Man, family reunions are the best.
