Her Side of The Story

It was the start of my _____ Proper Noun year at Penn and classes had not started yet. I went out with some of my friends and ended up at McDonald's on 40th street. While sitting with my friend and soror Ashley, I noticed this _____ Adjective guy sitting with a few other _____ Proper Noun we knew. I pointed him out to her and we both started _____ Proper Noun. To be honest, that wasn't the first time I noticed JP. A few months prior, I saw him at a _____ Noun, but let's just say he wasn't in the best state of mind for conversation. After noticing him, a quick _____ Proper Noun search revealed that he was from Bloomfield (literally the next town over from where I grew up), and he went to MKA (my rival high school). With this information in tow, I was ready for Ashley to make an introduction...

After our McDonald's rendezvous, I knew I had to see him again. The next night while at _____ Proper Noun with my sorors, I was eager to "bump" into JP. I sent a quick text out to one of his friends, and found out they were at a party at the basketball house. At that party, we spoke until the music stopped. I found this guy so _____ Adjective and way more _____ Adjective than anyone else I had met, even though he was younger than me. He suggested we have lunch that weekend, and even though I thought he was so _____ Adjective, I was _____ Adjective. Well, he was a _____ Noun of his word and we met for lunch at _____ Proper Noun the next day. At Cusi we ate, and talked, and talked, and talked...For nearly five hours.

Later that week, we went on our first official date to the _____ Proper Noun _____ Proper Noun _____ Proper Noun. After dinner, he suggested we _____ Proper Noun back to campus. It was still warm, a slight mist was in the air, and we sang _____ Proper Noun _____ Proper Noun as we _____ Proper Noun. It was cute, until my freshly pressed hair started to frizz and I kindly suggested taking a Proper Noun back to campus.

To this day, I still get Proper Noun in my stomach and excited to Proper Noun Proper Noun with the cute guy from McDonalds.
