_____ snatched the schedule back, blushing furiously.

They finished lunch and went outside into the overcast courtyard. Hermione sat down on a stone _____ and buried her nose in Voyages with _____ again. Harry and Ron stood talking about Quidditch for several minutes before Harry became aware that he was being closely watched. Looking up, he saw the very small _____ boy he'd seen trying on the sorting _____ last night staring at Harry as though transfixed. He was clutching what looked like an ordinary Muggle _____, and the moment Harry looked at him, he went bright red.

"All right, Harry? I'm - I'm Colin Creevey," he said _____, taking a tentative step forward.

"I'm in Gryffindor, too. D'you think - would it be all right if - can I have a _____?" he said, raising the camera hopefully.

"A _____?" Harry repeated blankly.

"So I can prove I've met you," Colin Creevey eagerly, edging further forward. "I know all about you. Everyone's told me. About how you survived when _____ tried to kill you and how he _____ and everything and how you've still got a _____ scar on your forehead" (his eyes raked Harry's hairline) "and a boy in my _____ said if I develop the film in the right potion, the _____ move." Colin drew a great shuddering breath of _____ and said, "it's amazing here, isn't it? I never knew all the odd stuff I could do was magic till I got the letter from Hogwarts. My dad's a _____, he couldn't believe it either. So I'm taking loads of pictures to send _____ to him. And it'd be really good if I had one of _____" - he looked imploringly at Harry - "maybe your friend could take it and I could stand next to you? And then, could you _____ it?"
