A Day in the Life Of Mrs. Eaton's Skills Class

It was just a Adjective day in Mrs. Eaton's skills class. We started by completing our independent reading . All was well, then things started to get a bit Adjective. First, there was a strange Verb - Present Tense noise. No one could figure out where it was coming from. At first, we thought it was someone at the door. We heard it again, it created an ache in our teeth, like nails on a chalkboard. We checked the doors and no one was there. So, we Verb - Past Tense to look in the closet in the back of the room. All we could find in there was just a bunch of Adjective books, a red broom, and a box of unused Noun - Plural. We asked ourselves, "Where is that noise coming from?" After a brouhaha, Mrs. Eaton settled us back into our seats. The noise disappeared for a while, but eventually it came back. At this point, everyone was out of their Noun, peeking in every corner, every nook and cranny, every Noun of the classroom. We eventually figured it out, but it was only by Noun. You would never have guess, the whole time, the scratching noise was the Adjective pencil echoing off the back wall. At least we thought...
