Day 69 on Bill's Blog

Yes, today was the first time we had what could be called Noun Noun this season but unfortunately the effect was that the Noun far from Varb - Present Tense did in fact get rather Adverb - Comparative. Yesterday the upper mountain was soft tracked powder and the mid mountain and below were Adjective Noun Noun. The warming conditions today meant that the upper mountain in the direct Noun softened and then as the sun went down reformed as fairly ugly Noun. The sun was not Adjective enough to have much effect on the crust so the conditions as we sit here are Adjective Noun on top and rain crust all the way down. The only exceptions are north facing upper slopes, and Polar Peak which were not sun affected today and so remain firm but taking a nice edge.

went to the Old Side and I spent the morning looping out into Cedar bowl skiing rain crust all the time. There were a number of near loops through Bear Cave Chutes, Cedar Ridge (different ways) and far loops through Snake Ridge and Steep and Deep. There were no tracks out to Snake so the runs were untracked although untracked crust and as such were really tough but fun. All returns (five times) were through Kangaroo which was actually nicely broken up crust and Boomerang which was also broken crust but starting to get sun softened on the skiers left lower down. I did have time for a couple of drops down Boom Ridge which was hard icy crusty bumps but a bit more broken up than before by some light skier traffic.

After a late lunch we went to the New Side and straight up Polar Peak which was firm but skiing ok. We looped Papa Bear, Grand Papa Bear, Crusty and Mama Bear all of which were firm but taking and edge with a bit of sift blown in. The view from the top of the Peak was just stunning, I can't remember a clearer or sunnier day. We dropped through Decline which was crusty and Window Chutes where we got first tracks (again crust in the chute and ice in the chokes) and some great skiing down to the cat track. I guess no one had been dumb enough to try Window Chutes, any time in the last four days.

We then made our big mistake. We Verb - Past Tense up Knot Chutes (that wasn't the mistake) and then Verb - Past Tense across to the top of the Tight Knot and dropped it. An hour or two earlier and we would have had great sun softened Noun but by the time we dropped in it had set up and we Verb - Past Tense the ugliest refrozen crud I have experienced for some time all the way down the Tight Knot. We got but in no great style but Verb - Past Tense. A Adjective side effect was that when we looped Surprise Trees next time round it seems easy skiing whereas without the Knot Chute experience we would have said it was ugly and icy - there is always an up side to be Verb - Past Tense.

Last run of course was Skydive which was Adjective just as it has been since Thursday's rain but getting slightly ______ to ski every day, or perhaps we are just getting better at it.

in ages - enjoy.
