Spaghetti

Alright, I'm gonna write about one of my many beatings as a child. One time, my mom was making spaghetti for dinner. I didn't want to eat spaghetti and I told my mom that. She said, "I don't care what you want, you're gonna eat this spaghetti." I was feeling bold that day so I said, "um actually I'm not gonna eat that spaghetti." My mom got because I kept going back and forth with her and getting smart, so she was like "now I'm bout to beat your" She starts taking off her so I start verb - Past Tense I'm Verb - Present ends in ING around the couch and she's chasing me. Here's where it starts getting it to my room and lock the door. My mom turns the knob, and starts pulling on it harder when she realizes that I locked it. She was like " Proper Noun Verb - Base Form this damn door." Three minutes later I still didn't unlock the door so my mom says "alright" and walks away. I'm on my bed all smug and smiling, thinking to myself how I just escaped a beating, when I start hearing the sound of an thing. Within a few minutes, my mom is in my room. She took my door off the hinges! Then she proceeded to give me an extraordinary beating, one for the books. I was on my bed crying for like twenty minutes. I still ended up eating that too. And I didn't have a door for like three months. Moral of the story is, if your mom makes spaghetti, eat the spaghetti.
