How to throw a budget surprise party

Your best friend's birthday party is coming up and you are as poor as church _____Animal (plural)_____? I've got great news for you: a surprise party doesn't need a limo and a coc ktail bar to be awesome! Read the tips below on how to be _____Adjective_____ and save yourself some money, while still being a great and _____Adjective_____ friend .

Location rental can cost you an arm and a _____Part of Body_____. Luckily, there are countless cheap alternatives. Instead of a fancy nightclub, consider throwing the party at _____Location_____. This way, your guests can enjoy the _____something that can be found in previous location_____ while sipping their mojito's.

Speaking of mojito's, making your own coc ktails is an extremely effective way to keep your party low-budget. Instead of hiring a _____Adjective_____ coc ktail-shaker, mix some _____liquor_____, _____liquid_____, _____fruit_____ juice, and _____herb_____ in a big jar. Add some _____food_____ for that little extra flavour. Serve them in _____Adjective_____ glasses and let the party begin!

Decoration is key to giving your party that little extra class and glamour. Rose bouquets and real Picasso paintings are absolutely not necessary and can even give your guests the impression that you want to brag. Instead, fill the room with _____Adjective_____ _____Noun - Plural_____ and _____Adjective_____ _____Noun - Plural_____. No need to rent porcelain china; just order some cheap _____material_____ plates online. Cover the tables with plain paper and make sure there are some color pencils on each table, so the guests can decorate them with drawings of _____Noun - Plural_____ and _____Noun - Plural_____.

Dancers, clowns, _____profession providing services or entertainment - plural_____ and other entertainers are hot and everyone seems to be getting one or more to spice up their party. For your friend's surprise party, opt for a more budget option and ask your _____name for family member_____ to _____verb - activity_____ in front of the guests. Games and activities are also great ways of keeping the party lively. Divide the guests up into teams and have them guess fun trivia about the birthday girl, such as her favourite movie and the first time she _____Verb - Past Tense_____ with a boy.

Last, but not least, cut back on the costumes. Who needs a fancy theme-party with costumes from the _____time period or era_____? Have people dress up in hand-made _____mythical creature_____ and _____profession_____ costumes instead.

When it's time to go home, give each guest a little thank-you note, folded into a _____Noun_____. Write a personal message for each of the guests, such as: "Thank you for _____Verb - Present ends in ING_____ with us. Your presence was _____Adjective_____."

Good luck!
