The Black Sheep

(Adapted from a story by Augusto Monterroso)

Once upon a time there was a Adjective black Noun. She stuck out from the Noun Plural.

She was Verb Past Tense. One hundred years later, the flock felt guilty and Verb Past Tense a

Adjective Noun of her in the Noun. From then on, any new Adjective black

Noun Plural were also Verb Past Tense so that future generations of common Noun Plural could also try their hand at Verb Present ends in ING.
