The Master Mage

There once was a common noun who had Adjective abstract noun. She knew all the answers on a quiz, and could even solve the superlative of problems Adjective and Adjective. However, she was Adjective in magic and in social skills, she always relied on her abstract noun and never irregular past tense verb up any other abilities. One day, a warrior noticed demonstrative mages trouble with social situations, so He decided to help her. He trained with her day and night, showing her how to be polite and not be a know-it-all. When he was finished, he continued his journey. Then another common noun saw her struggle with magic and decided to show her some basic spells. When she was done training the common noun, she too continued on her journey. Now the common noun was comparative superlative than ever before. she became a battle common noun, and won many wars with her new-found skills, by building bonds between empires and bringing common noun together. They then formed one, powerful empire called Proper Noun, and the common noun of this empire were called proper adjective. This was a land full of peace and serenity, this became the mages legacy.
