This morning, my sister Kelly and I walked up the road to the _____Adjective_____ shed above our house. We were doing our daily chore of feeding the barn cats. We were walking up the road when suddenly, we heard a _____Adjective_____ meowing coming from the side of the road! We _____Irregular Past Tense Verb_____ over to where the meowing was coming from and, much to our surprise, we found _____Proper Noun_____, a young _____Noun_____, lost in the _____Adjective_____ grasses! Kelly scooped him up and made sure he was okay. I could see the _____Abstract Noun_____ on her face. We noticed that he was wet from the dewy grass and that he was shivering. His fur was so slicked from the water that he looked like a _____Proper Adjective_____ _____Noun_____! We rushed the rest of the way to the shed and brought him inside. While Kelly fed the other _____Noun Plural_____, I looked for something to dry _____Same Proper Noun_____ of with. "Hey!" Kelly suggested "What about _____Demonstrative-Plural_____ towels in that cat bed over there!" We grabbed the towels and started to dry him off. "Thank goodness he wasn't any _____Comparative_____, or we may not have had enough towels!" I said after he was dry "Yeah" Kelly agreed. We then wrapped him in a purrito with another dry towel and put him near his mother. "I think he's the _____Superlative_____ _____Noun_____ there, now that he is dry!" I commented as we walked back to the house.
