The Terror Attack

All Lucy heard was the loud as the bomb went off in the underground. All around her, there were and and people. She tried to move away from the scene, but her had what felt like tonnes of covering it. She continued, the adrenaline still coursing through her, but it was no use - she was stuck fast. Her workplural clothing were verb Past Tense and she could taste Noun in her Part of Body. In the distance, she thought she noticed a Adjective figure, but she put it down to the stress of the situation. To her left, she could see a to those around her, but it was no use; they were almostAdverb awareness. In a bout of and and she found strength she never thought she had and Verb Past Tense the Noun Plural off her Verb Past Tense Part of Body .

Lucy Verb Past Tense over to the Adjective train door and Adverb Verb Past Tense her out. It was almost pitch in the underground as the explosion had caused most of the power lines to be cut. Lucy couldn't see anyone, so, as as she could, she crept out.
Her colour had been Verb Past Tense on the broken Noun from the windows. As she onto the platform, she noticed the figure again at the top of the stairs only
