Full Moon Folly

Adjective
Noun
Noun Plural
Noun
Noun
Noun Plural
Verb Base Form
Noun Plural
Adjective
Adjective
Noun Plural
Noun Plural
Noun
Noun Plural
Noun
Noun
Adjective
Noun
Noun
Adjective
Noun
Adjective
Noun

24.	Noun
25.	Adjective
26.	Adjective
27.	Noun
28.	Noun
29.	Verb Present Ends In Ing
30.	Noun Plural
31.	Adjective
32.	Adjective
33.	Adjective
34.	Noun
35.	Noun
36.	Verb Present Ends In Ing
37.	Noun
38.	Noun
39.	Noun
40.	Adjective
41.	Noun
42.	Adjective
43.	Noun
44.	Noun
45.	Noun
46.	Noun
47.	Verb Past Tense
48.	Noun

49.	Noun
50.	Adjective
51.	Noun
52.	Verb Past Tense
53.	Noun
54.	Verb Past Tense
55.	Noun
56.	Noun
57.	Verb Present Ends In Ing
58.	Noun
59.	Noun
60.	Verb Past Tense
61.	Noun
62.	Noun
63.	Noun
64.	Adjective
65.	Noun
66.	Adjective
	Noun
68.	Verb Past Tense
69.	Noun
	Noun
	Noun
	Noun
73.	Noun

74.	Noun
75.	Noun
76.	Noun
77.	Adjective
	N
	Adjective
	N
	Noun Verb Past Tense
	A. D
	Adjective
	Noun
	Adjective
86.	Noun
87.	Verb Base Form
88.	Noun
89.	Verb Present Ends In Ing
90.	Noun

Full Moon Folly

Once upon a time there was a single, young woman named Kimberly* who'd just moved to a small town in the wilds of Appalachia. After a short while of adjusting to living in Coal Country and thinking she might like to finally put some roots down, she decided it was time to take a dip in the dating pool. Work kept her extremely busy and the Moun wasn't her thing, so meeting Noun Plural was hard. Seeing Kimberly's frustration, an office buddy suggested trying an on-line dating site. Even though she'd not had any luck with those sites in the past, she shrugged and said, "Sure. Why not?" A selfie photo shoot was soon completed and a profile was set up. In it she displayed her varied interests including her love of,, fast, and martinis using her signature snark. "If a man can't speak sarcasm, he just isn't worth my time," she snickered as she composed her responses to the site's prompts. With the profile submitted, she sat back and waited for the matches to come in.
The next day, she received the e-mail notifying her of her profile approval and first round of matches. Kimberly knew all about the penchant of on-line daters toabout themselves, so she opened the missive with a bit of and a healthy dose of Adjective Kimberly was a modern girl, so making the first move to initiate a conversation didn't intimidate her. Though to aid in her decision of whom to message, she decided to sort the matches based on a few simple criteria: (1) Are there common? She didn't buy the whole opposites attract idea, so she hoped she would have a few Noun Plural in common with a man. It would definitely make initial contact and subsequent conversations easier to navigate. (2) Does he mention a love of and/or and/or ? She believed this might indicate how open a man is about As she scanned the men's profiles she mused, "A man who loves his usually knows how to treat a woman, right?" (3) Is there a Adjective ? She wasn't all that picky about, and she was far from shallow; but she wanted to see right off the bat if any of these men looked like a potential or were sporting a Adjective Noun .

While Kimberly was perusing the more promising matches' profiles, an instant message from a man named Chris * popped up. He wasn't on her list of matches, so she checked out his profile real quick. "29, single, Noun, Adjective enthusiast, Adjective Noun, kinda cute in a geeky way, no red flags in his profile like he might be a We seem to only have to in common, but what do I have to lose by talking to him?" she reckoned and accepted his chat request.
Kimberly IM'd and e-mailed with Chris for a few days; and they seemed to hit it off, discovering they had more in common than just a love of He seemed like a normal guy, if a little; but she could work with She was proud of her own The Full Moon Festival was happening that weekend at Riverfront Park, so they decided to meet at a local bookstore's bar on Saturday then head over to the festival after. During their date planning, Chris asked what she'd like to drink and offered to stop at the bar as soon as he arrived if she'd get a for them when she got there. Knowing the bar was usually busy on the weekend, Kimberly arrived a few minutes early to claim their Noun .
She spotted Chris immediately when he entered, not only because she recognized him from his photos but also because

he. was	Verb Present ends in ING	a	And not just an	y Noun	, but a	Noun that was abo	out three sizes too big a	nd looked suspici	ously similar to a 7	70's eraAd	jective	Noun
She though	t to herself, "Okay, may	be he just has an	eclectic sense of st	yle. But a	Adjective	- Noun	?? Still, I can't ding	him for it without	at least giving a _	Noun a	chance."
After Chris	grabbed their drinks-a	Full Moon Martir	ni for Kimberly, a E	Bud Light for h	im-and some	;
Noun	and,	he came to the ta	ble andverb Pa	st Tense a	Noun	_ in her hand. "
For you, mi	ilady," he gallantly state	ed with a little boy	w. "I brought you a	copy of my	Noun	about the Adjective	Noun ir	Weston. I	Verb Past Tense it f	or you, too." Sl	he couldn't h	elp but giggle at his flouri	sh, but she thought it od	dd that he'd never	mentioned being a	n Noun	_ in all of th	eir conversatio	ons, especially since he	seemed so proud	of his achievement.	Kimberly inte	rnally shrugg	ged. It was a minor thing	g, and she shouldn't look	t for things to nitp	pick. At least not ye	et.
As they	Verb Past Tense their	Noun a	nd chatted, Kimber	ly noticed Chri	s shoveling	handfuls of Noun	into his mouth and	Verb Present ends	with his	mouth full. It v	vas totally gr	rossing her out
, but she tric	ed to ignore it by lookir	ng down at the	Noun or arou	and the room in	nstead of ma	king eye contact. She	e ended up locking eyes	s with a Noun	at the table be	ehind Chris and	l watched his	m most of the time.
Their conve	ersation also ventured in	nto the bizarre. It	turned out that Chr.	is's single statu	s wasn't as c	ut and dried as he'd led her	to believe. Although he	e was Verb Pas	, neither	he nor his estra	ingedN	oun were financially	stable enough to live or	their own; so the	ey were still living t	together. In. a.	studio. apart	ment. She barely resisted rolling	her eyes and saying	g, "Sure. Tha	t's not suspi	cious or anythi	ng." He then	proceeded to describe a Noun	he'd had with his	Noun	and his	Adjective	Noun	_ and a whole lot of other Adjective	Noun he	e'd like to try	/ next.

Kimberly was _	Verb Past Tense	_ at the turn	in their excl	hange. She was	not a	by any stretch, but the topic of	Noun and	Noun	seemed	more like a thir	d or fourth d	ate discussion not a first date one. She w	as kind of offended	l since he jus	st jumped rig	ght into it with a	absolutely no	segue. To keep from throwing her dr	ink in Chris's face,	she guzzled	that shit fast	t. She was not a	bout to wast	e precious vodka on this
Noun
She somehow n	nanaged to steer the	conversation	on to their	Noun , b	ut the red fla	g was waving furiously.
The Noun	at the next table	e heard what	t Chris said a	and gave some	major	too. She needed to escape this d	ebacle of a date fast	t, so she exc	used herself	to the Noun	to figu	are out what to do.
When she emer	ged from the	Adjective	Noun	having decide	ded to attemp	ot a covert escape without passing Chris o	n the way, the	Adjective	Noun	from the no	ext table was	waiting on her. He introduced hims	self, "Hi, I'm Matt*	. That dude y	you're with i	s a Class A	Noun	I know a back way out.
Wanna go to the	e festival with me?'	,
She Verb Pas	st Tense herself a	t Matt in	Adjective	Noun	"Bless ye	ou! It's nice to meet you, Matt. I'm Kimb	erly, and I'd love to	," she respoi	nded. So beg	gan a wild and r	aucous	Adjective Noun	the likes of which n	either had e	ver experien	ced. And they l	ived happily	ever after.

^{*}names have been changed to	Verb Base Form	_ theNoun	Oh, who am I kidding, ain't nobody Verb Present ends in ING	these	. Ha!

©2025 WordBlanks.com · All Rights Reserved.