Mayor's Letter for Capital Commitment 2017

Dear DCPS Community:

Just over a decade ago, our city made the choice to transform the way public education in the District of Columbia works for our students, _____Noun Plural_____, and _____Noun Plural_____. In order to set more young Washingtonians up for _____Noun_____ in school and in life, we made the choice to invest in the modernization of _____Adjective_____ buildings throughout our city while also looking at every _____Noun_____ of how teaching and learning was happening in our schools.

As many will remember, at first the reforms simply meant getting _____Noun Plural_____ and other supplies out of warehouse boxes and into _____Noun Plural_____. Then, we doubled-down on measuring student achievement, because we knew that in order to fix our system's opportunity gaps, we had to _____Verb Base Form_____ them. As we learned more about where and how students were achieving, and as the national conversation around content and skills became more focused on what students in the 21st century need to know and be able to do, we worked _____Adverb_____ with educators in DC and around the _____Noun_____ to _____Verb Base Form_____ how and what we were teaching our students.

In 2012, DCPS released a five-year _____Adjective_____ plan that recommitted the system to providing every student with a _____Adjective_____, academically challenging, and _____Adjective_____ learning experience. Today, five years later, we know without a doubt that DCPS is on the _____Noun_____. DCPS continues to be the fastest improving urban school district in the country, and a recent report confirmed that our schools have made significant gains on student achievement, graduation rates, Advanced Placement exams, student satisfaction, and _____Noun_____. However, there is still much more work to be done to ensure that every student, in every ward of our city, receives the _____Noun_____ and _____Noun Plural_____ they deserve.

This new five-year strategic plan presents a set of priorities and goals that will continue to _____Verb Base Form_____ DCPS into a school _____Noun_____ of both _____Noun_____ and equity. In the months leading up to the creation of this plan, we _____Verb Past Tense_____ from thousands of students, educators, families, and community members about their _____Noun Plural_____ for the future of DCPS. With its focus on creating a more equitable system, this new five-year strategic plan reflects the _____Noun_____ of families and educators who all want the best for their own children, but also _____Verb Present ends in S_____ that our city cannot reach its full potential if policies and _____Noun Plural_____ do not support all children.

Today, our school communities are stronger than they have ever been, and I am committed to continuing the _____Noun Plural_____ we are making in and out of the classroom that ensure all students are exposed to a diverse range of _____Adjective_____, hands-on learning _____Noun Plural_____. A Capital Commitment 2017-2022 will help us give more students a fair shot at success by focusing the energy of all eight wards on creating a system of _____Noun_____, equity, and _____Noun_____.

_____Adverb_____,
