Attack of the Droolers

The group of people such as babies approached slow and steady like a wave of zombies. They wanted dinner.
couldn't run away because I was chained to the No matter how hard I tried the chains wouldn' budge.
When the first one reached me they shouted, "expression or lyrics!"
I wondered if I could talk them into
"I'm a real!" I added, trying to make my face look funny. Maybe try distracting them, I though clung to my legs. I screamed. It was more than I could stand. I remembered, panic stricken, the time when Full Name of a Person had dropped the Noun pie on top of my head, Adjective goo running down me, my arms difficult to move with the sap seeping into every where. Presently, I fainted.

When I woke up they had gummed me into a verb Present ends in ING mess but their drool had made the chains so slippery that I had just out of them. I was free as a I sat up, laughing and patted a particularly cute Adjustive one on the head
