Who is Alabama quarterback Tua Tagovailoa?

Sometimes, it pays to wait and watch, _____ Verb Present ends in ING your _____ Noun Plural until you can show the world just what you can do.

For Tua Tagovailoa, his chance came on college football's _____ Adjective Ends in EST stage, when Alabama Coach Nick Saban decided at halftime to replace quarterback Jalen Hurts with his freshman from Hawaii, a guy who had been offered a _____ Noun only after Jake Fromm _____ Verb Past Tense his _____ Repeat Last Noun at Georgia.

It was a wild ride from there, with Tagovailoa completing one of the best game-winning passes in a college-football game since Doug Flutie as the Crimson Tide won in overtime. But the glory of that _____ Number yard touchdown pass came after a _____ Adjective moment in which he took a sack. "Tua probably couldn't have thrown that pass if I could have _____ Verb Past Tense him after the sack," Saban said afterward, "but I couldn't get out there fast enough."

The legend of Tagovailoa was years in the making, of course, and has roots in Polynesia, with a nod to Marcus Mariota, the _____ Noun winner three years ago. "To the Polynesian community, I hope and pray that this is only the beginning," Mariota said as he accepted the _____ Repeat Last Noun that night. "Young _____ Adjective athletes everywhere, you should take this as motivation, and dream big and strive for _____ Noun Plural."
