The Origin of Easter Eggs

Once upon a time, there was a King who had a very _____ Adjective magician at his court. One day, the magician gave the king a hen that laid beautiful eggs for a present. The king liked the eggs, but he was _____ Adjective, and he told his magician that he would like the hen better if she could lay eggs made of _____ Noun Plural. So, the Magician _____ Verb Past Tense another magic _____ Noun, and sure enough, the hen started laying eggs made of _____ Adjective.

The king was delighted. He became very _____ Noun, and the the other kings felt envious of him. He kept his special hen in a golden cage next to his _____ Noun. He knew that someday, someone would try to _____ Verb Base Form his hen, so whenever visitors came, he would have his magician come and hide the special hen, and substitute a _____ Adjective hen in the cage.

Sure enough, one day, someone ran off with the hen in the golden cage. The king was glad that he had had his magician switch the hens. He sent word for the magician to bring back his hen. But the next day, when the king looked in his golden cage, all he found was a _____ Adjective rabbit. "What's this?" asked the king. " _____ Adjective rabbit, how did you get in here?" The king opened the cage, and had his footman take the rabbit back to _____ location where it belonged. Then he called for his magician.

"Where is my magic hen?" asked the king. "I told you to bring her back." "I did bring her back," said the magician.

"I put her in the cage, I just didn't have time to change her back into a hen."

They never did find the Adjective white rabbit, but from that day forward, children found colorful eggs hidden all over the kingdom. And some say that every once in a while, someone found a Adjective Noun.
