Weird dream

I'm in a Place on the edge of a Noun, and over the same noun way off in the distance I see a Adjective city shaped like a wagons Noun (kinda like Midgar in FFVII, but the first occurrence of this dream predates that game). After looking at the city for a bit or while, I turn around and a few number in word form ex hundred ten yards behind me I see a bunch of Noun laying face up or face down on the ground. A few men are Verb Present ends in ING among them and Verb Present ends in ING them in the back of the Part of Body.

I run up and lay down beside one of them and ask "why don't you Verb Base Form? They're going to Verb Base Form you anyway."

"It's suppose to be this way." He replied.

I hear a noise and look up, and see three craft that look very similar to the newer VW Beetles, but instead of wheels they have a Adjective ducted fan set into the bottom of their chasis. They are flying in a triangle formation and when they Verb Base Form over me, they start turning back in my direction.

I stand up and start Verb Present ends in ING toward some Adjective buildings, one of them being shaped like a ships Noun Plural stack, even tilted sideways a bit as they are. I Verb Base Form into this building and it's some kind of Noun shop. I start looking at some stuff in a Adjective display counter and notice a Noun affixed to a rope, and upon the same noun are number symbols arranged in a shape: a shape at top, and a shape and shape at the bottom.

I'm pondering this stone when a little girl (number years old) with shoulder-length color hair and a full-length color dress tugs at my arm. "It's your name," she says, "your new one. But you'd better Verb Base Form! same base form verb, same base form verb, same base form verb!"

So I start Verb Present ends in ING around the store trying to find a way out, but all I see are Noun Plural; no Noun Plural. I always wake up at this point in a Adjective, Adjective sweat.

Every time I've had the dream I've felt Adjective for days afterward.

It's the only dream I've ever had more than once.
