Weird dream

I'm in a on the edge of a, and over the way off in the distance I see a city shaped like a wagons (kinda like Midgar in FFVII, but the first occurrence of this dream predates that game). After looking at the city for a, I turn around and a few umber in word form ex hundred ten yards behind me I see a bunch of laying face up or face down on the ground. A few men are in ING them in the back of the Part of Body.
I run up and lay down beside one of them and ask "why don't you? They're going to you anyway."
"It's suppose to be this way." He replied.
I hear a and look up, and see three craft that look very similar to the newer VW Beatles, but instead of wheels they have a ducted fan set into the bottom of their chasis. They are flying in a triangle formation and when they over me, they start turning back in my direction.
I stand up and start Verb Present ends in ING toward some Adjective buildings, one of them being shaped like a ships stack, even tilted sideways a bit as they are. I into this building and it's some kind of shop. I start looking at some stuff in a display counter and notice a Noun affixed to a rope, and upon the same noun are number symbols arranged in a shape : a shape at top, and a shape and shape at the bottom.

I'm pondering this stone when a little girl (years old) with shoulder-length hair and a full-length dress tugs at my arm. "It's your name," she says, "your new one. But you'd better Verb Base Form ! same base form verb , same base form verb , same base form verb !"
So I start verb Present ends in ING around the store trying to find a way out, but all I see are Noun Plural; no Noun Plural. I always wake up at this point in a Adjective, Adjective sweat.
Every time I've had the dream I've felt for days afterward.
It's the only dream I've ever had more than once.
