I am a serial sprainer, in the _____Number_____ years my boyfriend has lived with me, I have sprained my ankle _____Number_____ times. I have tripped random stupid crap, dog toys, a _____Noun_____ in the grass, stairs, anything my ankles can find they will try to kill me on.

Michael is always there, _____Verb Present ends in ING_____ me and nurturing my _____Adjective_____ heels. I always thought one day I will be there to _____Verb Past Tense_____ his aches when he would fall.. but he never fell. In the _____Number_____ years we have lived together he has never once slipped on _____Noun_____, tripped on a _____Noun_____, tumbled over an _____Noun_____, or even dragged his _____Part of Body_____ across some slippery _____Noun_____. That was until yesterday. We were Uber Eats delivering in the _____Adjective_____ snowfall we had in Kansas, thinking we might get some decent tips. We delivered to this townhome complex, he got out to deliver while I stayed in. On his way back to the car his phone _____Verb Past Tense_____ for another delivery. He pulled out his phone, and instead of paying attention down he went on a patch of ice.

He didn't fall and crack, he fell down with enough grace to land on his _____Part of Body_____ and his _____Part of Body_____. Still, beggars can't be choosers. It was my turn. I was going to _____Verb Base Form_____ him now. I was going to nurture his _____Adjective_____ softball bumps. I was going to pick him up and help him to the car and baby him while he sniffled and _____Verb Past Tense_____. I was going to be the hero for once.. keyword being "was ." I lept out of the car. "I can be your hero baby" played in my head like elevator music. I felt my cape flowing figuratively behind my back. Suddenly I was on the ground, my knee twisted at an _____Number_____ degree angle . My _____Part of Body_____ hurt so bad, I thought I broke it. Unlike him, I did not fall gracefully. I hit the ground with such a _____Sound_____ that the lady in the car next to us got out ready to _____Verb Base Form_____ me. I laid there on the ground, air knocked out of me. Enrique Iglesias' "Hero" stopped abruptly and instead sirens were blaring in my head. I instinctively wriggled my feet to see which one was going to get too thicc for socks. Everything seemed fine until I went to get up. Nope. My _____Part of Body_____ was kaput, and I let out a gasp in surprise. Of course Michael was up, not even bruised or _____Verb Present ends in ING_____, ready to swipe me up and _____Verb Base Form_____ me into the car. Michael and this _____Adjective_____ lady were trying to help me up, but I elected to chubby baby crawl by the car so I could get up myself. I had them open the door and I crawled in, thanking the lady and _____Verb Present ends in ING_____ myself in. As I sniffled and _____Verb Past Tense_____ my wounds, he told me he was grateful that my first reaction was to try to help him. We _____Verb Past Tense_____ and joked about how funny it was. It was like a cartoon skit, I was Peter Griffin falling down and holding my knee, _____Verb Present ends in ING_____ between my teeth. One moment I was coming around the car the next I was on the ground with a shocked look on my face. I am still _____Verb Present ends in ING_____ about it. He went to the store to get us some _____Noun Plural_____ since we didn't want to end the night on a bad note, and once he disappeared into the store I just bawled and _____Verb Past Tense_____. Today I am confined to the bed, wishing we had our uber card already so we could get some _____Noun_____ and gooey _____Noun_____.
