boi

_____First Name of a Person_____ looked in a store window across from her, one of the few with glass, wondering what would have been displayed. She imagined _____Noun Plural_____, dressed in _____Adjective_____ _____Noun_____, but when she tried to picture them, all she could see was blank faces, concealing something. She suddenly felt out of place, unwelcomed by the building itself. Charlie began to feel restless, some of the luster wearing off the adventure. They had come; _____Proper Noun_____ was gone, and so was the shrine she had kept in her thoughts, where she could still find _____First Name of a Person_____ playing where she last saw him.

_____First Name of a Person_____ stopped suddenly, turning off the _____Noun_____ as carefully as he could. He put a finger to his lips, motioning for silence. He _____Verb Base Form_____ back the way they had come. In the distance, they saw a small light bobbing in the darkness like a ship in the fog.

"Someone else is here," he hissed.

"A night guard, maybe?" Carlton whispered.

"Why would an abandoned building need a guard?" Charlie wondered.
