The Tortoise and the Hare

A Noun was making fun of the Noun one day for being so Adjective.

"Do you ever get anywhere?" he asked with a Verb Present ends in ING Noun.

"Yes," replied the Noun, "and I get there sooner than you think. I'll Verb Base Form you a Noun and prove it."

The Noun was soon far out of Noun, and to make the Noun feel very Adverb how Adjective it was for him to try a Noun with a Noun, he lay down beside the course to take a Noun until the Noun should catch up.

The Noun meanwhile kept going Adverb but Adverb, and, after a time, passed the Noun where the Hare was Verb Present ends in ING. But the Noun slept on very Adverb; and when at last he did wake up, the Noun was near the Noun. The Noun now ran his Adjective Ends in EST, but he could not overtake the Noun in time.

Moral: The Noun is not always to the Adjective.
