Tales of a 4th Grade Nothing

When we were outside we took the crosstown then walked a few blocks to his
As soon as the nurse saw Fudge she said, "How's my favorite?"
She gave him a and a little book to read. To me she said, "Good morning, Peter."
It burns me up the way people treat Fudge. He's not so He's just, that's all!
But some day he's going to be nine years old too. I can't wait until he is. Then he'll know there's nothing so about him after all.
Soon the nurse said, "Fudge, Dr. Brown is ready for you. Come with me now." Fudge took the nurse's Noun Dr. Brown has this rule about Noun Plural in the examining room with kids-they're not allowed! Mothers are a problem, Dr. Brown told me once. I agreed.
I looked through a National Geographic magazine while I After a few minutes the nurse came out and whispered something to my mother. I looked up, wondering what the big secret was.
Then my mother said, "Peter, Dr. Brown would like you to him with Fudge."
"Help him?" I said. "I'm no!"
The nurse said, "Peter, dear if you'll just come with me I'm sure everything will out fine
." So I went with the "What do I have to do?" I asked her.
"Oh, not much. Dr. Brown just wants you to Fudge how you open your mouth and how he your teeth."
"What do I have to do that for?" I asked. "I don't need a yet. I just had one last month."

"Your brother won't open his this morning," the nurse whispered.
"He won't?" I whispered back. "No, he won't!" she said again.
I thought that was pretty I never considered refusing to open my mouth at the dentist's
When he says "Open"-I !!
When we reached the examining room Fudge was verb Present ends in ING in the chair. He had a around his neck and he looked all ready for action.
Dr. Brown was showing him lots of little things and explaining what he does with each one. Fudge kept nodding but he wouldn't open his
"A Peter!" Dr. Brown said when he saw me. "Would you open your mouth so I can count your
?"
That's what he tells little kids he's their teeth. Little kids will believe anything!
I went along with Dr. Brown's joke. I opened my mouth very Much wider than when I'm the patient. He put his in and said, "Wonderful teeth
. Just A regular chip off the old block. Such a shame your brother can't open his mouth the way you do."
"Can so," Fudge said.
"No," Dr. Brown told him, "you can't open your mouth nearly as as Peter."
"Can so see!" Fudge his mouth.

"No, I'm sorry, Fudge," Dr. Brown said, "it's still not as as Peter."
So Fudge opened his mouth really wide. "teeth!" he said. "Count Fudgie's teeth!"
"Well " Dr. Brown pretended to think about it.
"!" Fudge shouted.
"Well " Dr. Brown said again, his head. "I guess as long as you're here I might a well count your teeth." So he checked Fudge's mouth.
When he was through Fudge said, "See see just like Pee-tah."
"Yes," Dr. Brown said, Verb Present ends in ING
