Send in the Clowns

I'd like to talk to you about a _____ Adjective topic concerning the clown industry. As a former clown myself, I'm saddened about what has become of this once _____ Adjective institution. You see, clowns back in my day used to instill happiness and _____ Abstract Noun wherever they went. However, lately, clowns have been vilified and portrayed as _____ Adjective monsters with _____ Adjective intentions. Just look at some of the most popular movies out there that have turned these once fun _____ Verb Present ends in ING characters into _____ Adjective serial killers. If you need convincing, I ask you to consider "The _____ Noun" an infamous clown villain in the DC Comics Batman movie. How about the recent horror movie "IT" about a clown by the name of _____ Two syllable noun wise, a demonic clown that terrorizes children with his _____ Adjective ability to use their worst fears against them. Why have clowns become demonized in this way? It's not right! I've had to watch sadly, as former clown friends AKA Bubbles, _____ Adjective, and _____ Noun Plural the clown give up their clown dreams because they just couldn't make ends meet. So in conclusion, we need to save this dying breed of _____ Noun Plural. We need to change the way clowns are portrayed in the media and most of all, we need to, "Send in... the _____ Noun Plural."
