Otto's Rainbow

Otto the gorilla was a _____Adjective_____ guy. He swung from the _____Noun Plural_____ with a banana in hand, ready to bring a smile to all his friends. He would _____Verb Past Tense_____ and dance, sing and joke, play, and poke. Until one day, he decided to stop. He would stop juggling and dancing. He would stop singing and joking, playing and _____Verb Present ends in ING_____. He did not want to play or laugh. He was sad. You see, his rainbow was gone. He loved rainbows. It was like the sign that he needed to remind him to turn his friend's frown upside down. But with no more rainbow, there was no more sadness for him to cure, and he was _____Verb Past Tense_____. His friend Romeo came by one day, though, and smiled, asking him what was wrong. They talked and talked, and then sang a song. Otto's mood was boosted, and he grinned, looking up at the _____Noun Plural_____. Romeo went home, and Otto whispered a wish on a star, wishing for his rainbow to come back. When Otto woke up the next morning, to his surprise, the _____Noun_____ was back, but upside down like a smile, smiling at him. The End.
