Atlas: Five - Sleeping at Last

I want to watch the universe expand

I want to break it into pieces, _____Adjective_____ enough to understand

And put it all back together again

In the quiet of my _____Adjective_____ collection

It feels like an out of _____Noun_____ experience

But something gets lost from a safe distance

And now I can't put my _____Noun_____ to rest

And I can't help but second guess

_____Verb Present ends in ING_____ behind this one-way mirror

I'm _____Verb Past Tense_____ by this anomaly

Such strange uncharted territory

A _____Adjective_____ flag waves in the dark between my _____Part of Body_____ and my heart

My armor falls apart

As if I could let myself be seen, even deeply known

Like I was already brave enough to let go

And now I want to _____Adverb_____ lose

This _____Noun_____ that I've been hanging onto so desperately

I finally feel the universe expand

It's

hidden in _____Noun Plural_____, _____Noun Plural_____

And in the hope of _____Adjective_____ hands
