Student name and Harry led the way into the shop. It was packed with Noun Plural; Harry could not get near the shelves. He stared around, looking up at the boxes piled to the ceiling: here were the Skiving Snackboxes that the twins had perfected during their last, unfinished year at Hogwarts; Harry noticed that the Nosebleed was most popular, with only one battered box left on the shelf. There were full of trick wands, the cheapest merely turning into rubber or Article of clothing (plural) when waved, the most expensive beating the unwary user around the Part of the body and and, and boxes of quills, which came in Self-Inking, Spell-Checking, and Smart-Answer varieties. A space cleared in the crowd, and Harry pushed his way toward the counter, where a gaggle of delighted year olds was watching a tiny little wooden man slowly ascending the steps to a real set of gallows, both perched on a box that read: Reusable hangmanspell it or he'll swing!
