Uncle Tommy's Visit Horror Story

"Now remember, I don't want you talking to him unless I'm around, you hear?"

"Yes, dad."

"I'm serious. Now tuck in your _____clothing article followed by he is_____ here."

The front _____Noun_____ swung open and there stood Uncle _____Person_____, drenched in sweat from a day's work in the summer heat.

"It's a _____cool name for hot weather_____ out there, ain't it?" he said, putting his _____Noun_____ on the floor and untying his _____Noun Plural_____. "I appreciate you letting me crash for the night."

"Just so long as you're _____Adjective_____ in the morning," my dad replied _____Adverb_____.

"Of course."

"Now," Uncle _____Person_____ said, turning to me and lowering himself to a _____body part_____. "Where's my _____Noun_____ at? Been a while since I seen you last."

I took a couple steps toward him and leaned in for a hug. His tight embrace made me uncomfortable, and I let out a light _____onomatopoeia_____.

"Don't you know it's a hundred degrees out there?" he asked, tugging at my long _____Noun Plural_____.

"I haven't been outside today," I recited to him.

"Don't you have some chores to finish up?" _____Person_____ interjected.

I knew that was my cue to _____Verb Base Form_____, so I _____verb past tense modifying a noun_____ off to my room.

Later that night I lay in bed, tossing and turning, unable to be _____Adjective_____, when I heard the thud of _____Noun Plural_____ in the hallway outside my bedroom. After several long seconds of silence, the door opened quietly, the dark silhouette of a _____Noun_____ entered the room, and the door closed again. For several more seconds there was nothing but unrelenting _____Noun_____. I might have thought I had dreamt it all if it weren't for the sound of a _____Adjective_____ _____Noun_____ being carefully released.

I could feel him getting nearer. The warmth of another _____Noun_____ in the room was unfamiliar at this hour. I was not prepared for this; I prayed he would go away, to even come back in the morning if he must.

He reached down and _____verb past tense modifying a noun_____ me. He rolled me onto my _____body part_____ and lifted up my _____clothing article_____. From the corner of my eye I could see two things: the faint beam of a pocket _____Noun_____, and Uncle _____Person Possessive_____ _____Noun Plural_____ studying my bare _____body part_____. His _____Adjective_____ _____body part plural_____ ran up and down my _____body part_____. Suddenly, he got up and walked to the bedroom door and left. I tried again to fall asleep, eventually _____Verb Present ends in ING_____.

He was gone by the time I awoke.

Around noon the phone rang while my father was out.

"Hello?" I answered.

"Hey _____nickname_____."

"Uncle _____First Name_____?"

"Yeah. Your dad around?"

"No _____nickname_____. Went to the store."

"Good," he said, his voice a bit shaky. He was silent for a moment. "I'm calling about last night. I don't know if you were awake or not--"

"I was."

"Well, then I'll just get right to it. I've got a question for you, and I need for you to be honest with me. Can you do that?"

"Yes, _____nickname_____."

"How'd you get all them _____Noun Plural_____?"
