DEAR ABBY 2

DEAR ABBY: My _____number followed by year-old_____ nephew has always used women and was finally caught _____verb ending in ing modifying a noun_____ $60,000 from one of them. He was arrested and ordered to pay restitution, or he would stay in prison for years. After only two weeks of incarceration, he _____Verb Past Tense_____ and pleaded with our family and promised he would pay _____PErson_____ back the money if they would pay his restitution.

My sister was a _____Noun_____ and came to me. I came up with the money and got a promissory _____Noun_____ from my nephew. Long story _____Adjective_____, he stuck my sister with every _____Noun_____. When my sister went bankrupt because of it, I asked if he could at least pay $_____number_____ toward what he owed, but he did nothing. My sister finally _____verb past tense modifying a noun_____ everything my nephew owed me, and now she expects us all to be one big, _____Adjective_____ family.

She has invited me and my _____Noun_____ to come for the holidays, which will include my nephew. I told her I will never again be in the same room with that liar and _____Noun_____, so now she's upset with me! Am I making the right choice? He used all of us to get out of _____location_____, never paid anyone back and is still using _____Noun Plural_____. For that, I'm supposed to embrace him with open _____body part plural_____? I think it would be condoning his _____Noun Plural_____. -- UPSET AUNT

DEAR AUNT: I agree with you about that. Your instinctive reaction to keep your _____Adjective_____ nephew at arm's length (or even further) is _____Adjective_____. It's safer to keep people with no _____Noun Plural_____ at a distance.

After what happened, as much as your sister might wish it, you are no longer one _____Adjective_____

_____Adjective_____ family.
