DEAR ABBY 2

DEAR ABBY: My _____ _____ $60,000 from one of them. He was arrested and ordered to pay restitution, or he would stay in prison for years. After only two weeks of incarceration, he _____ with our family and promised he would pay _____ back the money if they would pay his restitution.

My sister was a _____ and came to me. I came up with the money and got a promissory _____ from my nephew. Long story _____, he stuck my sister with every _____. When my sister went bankrupt because of it, I asked if he could at least pay $_____ toward what he owed, but he did nothing. My sister finally _____ everything my nephew owed me, and now she expects us all to be one big, _____ family.

She has invited me and my _____ to come for the holidays, which will include my nephew. I told her I will never again be in the same room with that liar and _____, so now she's upset with me! Am I making the right choice? He used all of us to get out of _____, never paid anyone back and is still using _____. For that, I'm supposed to embrace him with open _____? I think it would be condoning his _____. -- UPSET AUNT

DEAR AUNT: I agree with you about that. Your instinctive reaction to keep your _____ nephew at arm's length (or even further) is Adjective. It's safer to keep people with no Noun Plural at a distance.

After what happened, as much as your sister might wish it, you are no longer one Adjective

Adjective family.
