DEAR ABBY 3

DEAR ABBY: My husband _____ away two years ago. I hope you can give me some advice on how to deal with my _____ daughter who never left _____. We generally get along well. She does freelance _____, but doesn't earn much. She contributes only $_____ a _____. Also, she has a _____ phobia, so she doesn't _____. She expects me to drive her to various _____.

She only has _____ friends. She wants to travel, but doesn't want to go alone and keeps pushing me to go with her, although I don't really want to. I have suggested group _____, but she hesitates to go by herself. I feel pressured to keep _____ and go along with her desires. How should I handle this? --

PULLING BACK IN NEVADA

DEAR PULLING BACK: You have protected and _____ your daughter far too long. Tell her that her dependence on _____ has become too much. She must overcome her _____ phobia (or at least take advantage of public _____) and her fear of _____ without you. Unless you have provided for her financially in the event of your death, how do you think she will survive living as a _____ with no employment and life skills?

There are _____ who specialize in ridding people of _____. While she's there, your daughter should also get help to gain a degree of _____ concept, even if it's about 30 years late.

DEAR ABBY: Recently, my three adult _____ Noun Plural chipped in to send their aunt _____ Noun for her birthday. She's _____ number and doesn't need anything; she doesn't even go out. Financially, she's in _____ Adjective shape. They placed the order, and it came to $_____ number. Well, Abby, my _____ Adjective mom went crazy! She thought that was too little to spend on their _____ Noun.

I think my kids were very _____ Adjective. They are all trying to build their _____ Noun Plural. One has two kids, a _____ Noun and a mortgage. The other just got engaged and is saving for the _____ event. The third is saving for her _____ Noun. My mother thinks her grandchildren should give her _____ Noun Plural and money. I think she should expect _____ Noun from her own _____ Noun Plural, not the _____ Noun Plural. I hung up on her when she attacked my _____ Noun Plural. She always thinks she's _____ Adjective. Your thoughts? -- LIVING WITH A DIFFICULT MOM

DEAR LIVING: Was Auntie satisfied with the meal? Your mother may think she is always right, but she was wrong to criticize the amount your children spent on _____ Noun for their _____ Noun. That she would then announce she expects _____ Noun Plural and money from them is beyond _____ Adjective. The decision about what to give is up to the _____ title, not the recipient.

DEAR

ABBY: My sister passed away from _____ body part _____ disease _____ 10 months ago. My brother-in-law no longer wants to live in the house they shared because of too many _____ Noun Plural _____, so he's giving the house to his daughter and moving into an _____ location _____. My other sister wants to throw him a housewarming party. Is that appropriate? -- WELL-MEANING IN THE EAST

DEAR WELL-MEANING: Of course it is, as long as it's OK with your _____ Noun _____. It's not only appropriate, it is a _____ Adjective _____, _____ Adjective _____ gesture and, in a sense, a celebration of _____ concept _____. Good for _____ Person _____!
