

DEAR ABBY 5

1. Age
2. Profession
3. Adjective
4. Adjective
5. Noun
6. Adjective
7. Adjective Ending In Er
8. Person
9. Person
10. Noun Plural
11. Profession
12. Adjective
13. Adjective
14. Adjective
15. Noun
16. Adjective
17. Noun
18. Adjective
19. Body Part Plural
20. Noun
21. Noun Plural
22. Noun Plural
23. Person

24. Person _____

25. Number _____

26. Person _____

27. Person _____

28. Noun _____

29. Noun _____

30. Noun _____

31. Person _____

32. Event _____

33. Person _____

34. Adjective _____

35. Number _____

36. Person _____

37. Person _____

38. Person _____

39. Noun _____

40. Person _____

DEAR ABBY 5

DEAR ABBY: I am a wife and mother in my late _____ age _____. I'm also a registered _____ profession _____, beginning a master's degree program to advance my career. I consider myself to be an _____ Adjective _____ person, and I did well in college.

My husband is also _____ Adjective _____, and I'm proud of his _____ Noun _____ in his career. However, he can be _____ Adjective _____ at times, giving the impression that he is _____ adjective ending in er _____ than everyone else around him -- including _____ person _____.

Today, I overheard him talking to his boss, whom he told about the master's program I am starting in a few weeks. He then told his boss he would probably have to write some of my papers for _____ person _____. I couldn't believe he said that. First of all, it's not true; I would never have anyone complete my work for me. Second, I found it insulting that he would say I need him to complete my _____ Noun Plural _____. (We are in different fields. He is an _____ profession _____.)

He didn't know I was home when he said it, but I walked into his office as soon as I heard. He looked _____ Adjective _____ and apologized, but I just can't get over it. I feel so _____ Adjective _____ and _____ Adjective _____. Is this what he tells his co-workers about _____ Noun _____? How do I move on? -- ACCOMPLISHED IN OHIO

DEAR

ACCOMPLISHED: Your _____ Adjective _____ husband's _____ Noun _____ may be threatened because you are becoming more academically _____ Adjective _____. He may also have been trying to inflate his image in his boss's _____ body part plural _____ by casting you as "the little _____ Noun _____" when you caught him red-handed. Regardless of what he may say to others, your _____ Noun Plural _____ speak for themselves. Don't you forget that. As for how to move on, it may depend upon your willingness to forgive him for his _____ Noun Plural _____.

DEAR ABBY: My son "_____ person _____" and his girlfriend, "_____ person _____," lived together for _____ number _____ years. We were all very close and did lots of family things together with my other son and his family. _____ person _____ broke up with _____ person _____ two years ago, although they continued talking for some time afterward. We all hoped they would make up. He was under a lot of _____ Noun _____ at the time and suffers from _____ Noun _____ and _____ Noun _____. He was sorry a month after the breakup, but _____ person _____ did not want to get back together.

We have stayed in touch. She still skates with my daughter-in-law, and we met for _____ event _____ recently. _____ person _____ mentioned she met someone on an online dating site six months ago and it could get _____ Adjective _____. This man knows she feels it's time for marriage and a family. He is _____ number _____ years older than she is, never married and has no kids. They are not living together. _____ person _____ has met his family.

Should I let my son know? I feel _____ person _____ needs to move on, and he really hasn't. I think he still hopes they will be together. -- PROTECTIVE MOM IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR MOM: _____ told you she had met someone because she knew you would deliver the message to your _____. If he has put his life on hold, hoping to reunite with her, he deserves to know it isn't in the cards -- so tell _____