The Jehovah's Witnesses

Some Jehovah's Witnesses Verb Past Tense on my Noun, and I was Adjective enough to answer. " Adjective day to you sir," the one said to me Adverb. "Would you like to hear about our Noun and Savior?" The other one asked. They looked like brothers with their Color hair, matching Article of clothing plural and ties, and that Adjective smile of theirs. Before I could say Verbal Expression to the invitation, they pulled out their Noun Plural and began preaching. They started with Genesis and the classic story of Adam and Eve who ate the Adjective Food from the Tree of Knowledge. " And God banished them from Noun as punishment for their disobedience." Said the one JW. Naturally, the boys segued into the story of Moses and the Number commandments, and Noah and his famous Noun. The history lesson eventually progressed after Number hours, to the book of First Name of a Person in the Adjective Testament, which is about the time I got up my nerve to say thanks for Verb Present ends in ING by. Oh, don't worry I was nice about it. I offered them each a/n Repeat Last Food, thanked them, and Verb Past Tense them on their way.
