Computer Trouble

I arose Tuesday morning at 10AM with a gasp. Late for my meeting, I _____(Verb Past Tense)_____ myself out of bed with no other thought than to race to my laptop to turn on the _____(Noun)_____. My heart _____(Verb Past Tense)_____, I watched as the _____(Adjective)_____ battery symbol flashed on the screen. I let out a cry like I had just _____(Verb Past Tense)_____ my toe and tore my room apart looking for the charger. It was nowhere to be found. In that moment, I thought of my _____(Noun)_____ drafting the letter informing me that my job had been terminated. My chest was heavy, my legs trembled. I threw pants on and ran out the door, grabbing my keys and _____(Noun)_____, barely locking the door. I made it to the train a few seconds before it left. Because it was so late in the day, the train was empty as all workers were already at their _____(Adjective)_____ offices. I shook my leg the entire thirty minutes, cursing every time the train took unnecessary _____(Noun Plural)_____. When the train stopped, I sprinted to the office like an Olympic runner. My mission was to _____(Verb Base Form)_____ someone from the IT team. I screamed for a charger and was handed one by a _____(Adjective)_____ colleague. I grabbed it and found a seat. I plugged in the charger to the outlet and opened my _____(Noun)_____ to find my computer. It was not there.
