Rosh HaShana in York

The Jews of York were really _____Adjective_____. It was almost Rosh Hashanah, and they were all preparing to go to the seder for a _____Adjective_____ meal with friends. Each family chose a _____Adjective_____ food to bring that symbolises goodness in the coming year. Eli's family brought beetrroot, because the Hebrew word for beetroot sounds like 'to remove', so that all our _____Noun Plural_____ should be forgiven. Iris's family decided to bring dates, which sounds like the word for ending, in the hope that all war will end this year. Lily's family brought black-eyed peas which sounds like the Hebrew words for abundant good fortune. Aaron's _____Noun_____ opted for pomegranates, whose 613 _____Noun Plural_____ represent the many ways we can make our lives holy. Jules convinced his family to bring gourds, because the word for gourd reminds us to rip up the past to make way for a new year. All of these _____Noun Plural_____ were placed on the table, and people fed them to one another with blessings. Then everyone dipped their apple slices in honey, getting ready to ask for a _____Adjective_____ new year. Suddenly, Rabbi Elisheva stood up, _____Verb Present ends in ING_____ one of the tables. 'Oh dear', she cried, 'we forgot to eat the fish heads!' Quickly, all the children ran to the front and fought over who got to eat the ones with the _____Adjective Ends in EST_____ eyes. The whole room heaved a sigh of relief once they were eaten, and the children started bragging about how many _____Adjective_____ eyeballs they were planning to eat next year. Now the _____Noun_____ could celebrate, knowing that the symbol for _____Adjective_____ increase was eaten. They enjoyed the apples with _____Noun_____, blessed the challah, and had a wonderful _____Noun_____.
