Camp Fun

The sun was shining as the first graders ran into Camp _____ Proper Noun. They wore name tags shaped like books and carried backpacks full of crayons and snacks. Ms. _____ Proper Noun, the camp teacher, said, "Today we'll make our own stories!" The kids sat in a circle and picked story dice. Each die had pictures--like a dog, a castle, a rocket, or a birthday cake. When they rolled them, silly ideas popped out! "My story is about a dog who rides a rocket to a birthday party!" shouted ____ Proper Noun. Everyone giggled and started drawing.

Later, the campers made story hats. On each hat, they glued pictures of the characters and places from their stories. ____ Proper Noun had a fairy on a ____ Noun. ____ Proper Noun had a robot in a ____ Noun. "Our heads are full of stories!" said Ms. ____ Proper Noun with a laugh. They marched around camp wearing their hats and telling their tales. Books, laughter, and crayons were everywhere. Summer reading camp had just begun, and it was already full of magic.
