Twass the Night Before Winter Break (teacher edition)

Twass the Night Before Winter Break...

Twass the night before winter break, and all through the Adjective school,

Not a student was stirring--not even the copier, which had finally stopped Verb Present ends in ING for the first time all year.

I sat at my desk eating my emergency Noun

Counting down the final Noun minutes like it was New Year's Eve.

Suddenly, a loud Noun echoed down the hallway,

Followed by a student announcing they had just seen Proper Noun in the cafeteria.

I took a deep breath and attempted to Verb Base Form gracefully,

While stepping over a pile of Noun that had mysteriously appeared outside my door.

My heart filled with Noun as the class asked where their Noun had gone-- As though I secretly collected them.

At last, the final bell rang

And I grabbed my trusty Noun and a to-go cup of Noun.

"Verb Base Form!" echoed through the hallways,

And just like that... winter break began, and all was calm, bright, and blissfully quiet.
