Cooking with Unicorn Juice

My _____Family member_____loves to cook. But sometimes I think she takes things a little too far. She deffinately crossed the line when she cut off my unicorn's horn and poured out all the juice inside it. Now, I thought it was bad when she fried my _____Animal_____'s legs, liquified my _____Animal_____'s saliva for a smoothie, clipped my _____Animal_____'s nails for some crutons, and bottled my _____Animal_____'s fart for "an air of flavor", but this- THIS IS TOO FAR! My poor, poor unicorn. _____Name of unicorn_____will never be the same. Now all the other unicorns laugh at him and call him a _____Adjective_____ _____Adjective_____horse. It's like a Rudolph the Reindeer story gone wrong. I once took _____Name of unicorn_____on a walk after this incident and some _____Adjective_____ _____Adjective_____hobo asked me where I got such a _____Adjective_____donkey. It hurt _____Name of unicorn_____'s self esteem terribly. I confronted my _____Family member_____about this and asked politely if she would consider gettin _____Name of unicorn_____'s horn professionly glued back on. She smiled and said _____Name of person_____dear, just try the soup I made with the unicorn juice."; Well, I did. AND IT WAS AMAZING! It tasted quite delicious. But about an hour later, I noticed something strange. My tounge had turned a vibrant shade of _____Color_____and my teeth were a stunning _____Color_____. Shocked, I went to splash water on my face thinking it was all a dream and I saw that my _____Body part_____had turned an amazing hue of _____Color_____Another horrid hour passed and my hair was a flaming _____Color_____It's terrible walking around my school with such colors! Lesson learned. Never cook with unicorn juice.
